

INVITATION

To mark ten years since the Welsh language standards came into force, Welsh Language Commissioner Efa Gruffudd Jones will reflect on their impact and their contribution to strengthening Welsh language rights.

She will also outline her vision for the next stage in the development of the Standards.

The Commissioner will be joined by Cabinet Minister for Education and the Welsh Language, Anna Brychan MS, who will share her perspective on the contribution of the Standards to the Government's aspirations for the Welsh language.

Chaired by Nest Jenkins, a panel discussion will consider how we can ensure that the Standards will continue to promote positive change across Wales.

We would very much like to have your company.
